After spending the night in Durango we headed to Santa Fe, NM. Our drive down was highlighted by a thunderstorm with hail that covered the car like wet snow. Here we stayed at a really cool resort and spa. We found a great restaurant Tres Colores, with wonderful Southwest Recipes. It was so good I had to eat there twice. Patricia enjoyed some well earned spa time.

A word of caution, if you drive a Porsche and especially a 356 on a cross country trip you are going to be the center of attention everywhere you go. At the National Parks we were swarmed at each trail head by curious tourists….what kind of car is that? How old is it? Is that the original color? Did you really drive all the way from KY? It's so cute!, many of the women would say. Yep Lemondrop.2 sure stole the show.

After a couple of days in Santa Fe we headed home via Oklahoma City and Memphis, where the generator decided to stop working. The brushes were shot but I did not have extras in the car. (I do now.) I stopped at an O'Reilly's and charged the battery to full and we made it home on battery power. With the lights off the battery was just powering the ignition so it was not a problem.

Another long trip, a little over 4000 miles and Patricia is still my wife and best friend! I always say drive em, that's what they were built for. The few problems were part of the journey and kept it challenging. 🐎
